

MAN SLAIN IN DUEL LED A DOUBLE LIFE, SLEUTHS DECLARE

Eight Mourning Sisters Believed Fedell a Contractor—
Criminal, Police Assert.

SLAIN BY CONFEDERATE?

Authorities Have Theory Quarrel Over Loot Led to Killing—Girl in Case.

Eight sisters mourn Antonio Fedell, who was found murdered in the woods near Millburn, N. J., on Friday, as a kind, loving and honest brother. Fedell's body was brought from Newark today to his late home at No. 19 Stanton street, where he lived with five of his sisters, who are unmarried.

Detectives of the Italian Bureau of the Central Office declare the Antonio Fedell, murdered by eight sisters and described by them as a prosperous contractor, was none other than Antonio Fedell, known to them as No. 821 in the "Bogues" Gallery. They declare, further, that Antonio Fedell was not a prosperous contractor and that he was probably killed because he tried to cheat some confederates out of their share of the proceeds of a crime.

According to the detectives, the Antonio Fedell they knew was a member of the old "lump" gang, served a term in Elmira Reformatory for counterfeiting and another term in prison for burglary. They say he was arrested, a few weeks ago, in Newark, N. J., while trying to sell horses stolen from a Harlan stable, and was at liberty on bail when he was found in the woods—possibly by a woman—and murdered.

HER BROTHER HAD SWEET HEART IN NEWARK.

The eight mourning sisters, sitting around the coffin in their Stanton street home, vehemently deny their brother was a bad man. They say he made frequent trips to New Jersey on contracting business and sometimes remained away for weeks at a stretch. They were not alarmed, when they did not hear from him recently, and had no intention of looking for him. It was only when the body was brought to Newark, the husband of one of them, went to Newark and identified the body yesterday.

With the identification came detectives from Newark, who questioned the sisters about their brother's affairs. They went through papers he left and took away a few letters. What they wanted to find was the name of a man who, they believed, was enamored of the same girl in Newark to whom Fedell had been paying attention. Marie Fedell, who was the favorite, if any, of her brother, talked with the detectives. "I told them," she said today, "that we knew our brother had a girl friend in Newark, but he kept his affairs to himself mostly. I did not know there was any one who might want to hurt him. He was always good and kind to us. We are eight sisters here, and he acted as the head of the family, although he was only twenty-eight years old. He was a contractor for building foundations and often had a large amount of money with him."

"We had thought we were so fortunate," said Marie Fedell. "Five of us worked in the Triangle shirt waist factory, but on the day of the fire we didn't go to work because it was a feast day. We have been paying to the school since then. Now comes the first big loss of us since our father and mother died."

When Fedell was found dead in the woods with a bullet through his heart the marks of the snow showed there was only one other man present when he received his death wound. Blood stained footprints in the snow showed the other man got away. The Millburn and Newark police concluded that the two men met in the lonely spot to fight out their grievance.

Uric Acid Causes Some of the Worst Aches and Pains of Humanity

There is no more danger when the kidneys are weak than the big family of "uric acid troubles," and so, when you notice that the kidney secretions have been much disordered for a time, do not be surprised if you begin to have rheumatic muscles and joints, nerve pains and nervousness, headaches and dizziness, heart weakness and dropsy, attacks of stone and gravel, deafness and poor eyesight.

The filtering of uric acid from the system falls upon the kidneys and if the kidneys are inactive, uric acid overloads the blood. Instead of nourishing the tissues, the blood starves and irritates them.

Uric acid has the habit of attacking the weakest part first. A brain worker will have nerve trouble or rheumatism. A strong, healthy-looking person will be liable to gravel, or stone, heart trouble, dropsy, or gout.

Acute uric acid attacks with awful pains often follow exposure, wet weather, overuse of alcohol, overwork, overexercise or excesses of any sort.

Aviator Rutherford Page Who Was Killed in Flight, But Won Boast to Beat Beachy

RUTHERFORD PAGE...

Reckless Young New Yorker
Was Out for the First Time as Licensed Aviator.

WARNED BY CURTISS.

LOS ANGELES, Cal., Jan. 22.—Rutherford Page, the young aviator who was killed by a fall of 100 feet yesterday at the third international aviation meet here, made good his declaration that he would beat Lincoln Beachy or "break my foot neck," according to an official announcement today. The time in the five-mile handicap event, in which Page met his death, showed that Page won in 37:54; Hoffman second, 4:00; Beachy third, 4:15.

Page, who was twenty-four, graduated in 1910 from Yale and lived at No. 27 East Thirty-eighth street, New York. He was instantly killed at the third international aviation meet being held here. His death is the first aviation fatality in this country in 1912, and is the one hundred and fourteenth in the world since actual flying began nearly four years ago.

Page was endeavoring to "turn on a pivot" when the swell of air over the hangars caught his plane. He made an effort to regain his balance, but evidently fearing the aeroplanes was beyond control, gave up, and when about sixty feet in the air plunged clear of the mid-air and fell flat into the ploughed ground. According to the doctors he was crushed to death.

Page was flying for the first time as a licensed aviator, having been awarded his license Saturday. His earlier flying was one of the spectacular features despite a puff and treacherous wind. He was one of the first to leave the ground, doing spectacular "stunts" in a DANGEROUS WIND.

In the first heat of the five-mile handicap, in which he and Lincoln Beachy, the Curtiss veteran, were the contestants, Page thrilled the crowd by his sensational maneuvers. All the dips and sharp turns made by Beachy were duplicated by Page, who was even more daring.

The more experienced aviators shook their heads when they witnessed Page's apparently suicidal evolutions, and when he descended Glenn Curtiss, who taught him to fly, cautioned him against attempting to perform feats at his first meet which required much experience to learn.

Page laughed and assured Curtiss that he was "all to the good." During the afternoon the young New Yorker had told those about the hangars that he would beat Beachy or "break my foot neck."

Glenn H. Curtiss said Page's death was due to lack of experience and his extreme daring. Immediately after the accident the wreckage of Page's machine was piled up and burned to prevent its being carried away piecemeal by souvenir hunters.

A telegram from Glenn H. Curtiss was received by the Curtiss Aeroplane Company in New York today in which he said:

"Page killed making short turn close to ground trying to excel Beachy."

It was said at the Curtiss offices that Page had just wanted to be an aviator and that he was a frequent visitor to the Curtiss headquarters. A few days ago Curtiss wrote from San Diego, Cal., that Page had been graduated from the aviator's training school and that he had purchased a machine.

Page had been living at Beaver Brook Farm, Milford, Conn. He went to San Diego, Cal., in November and took his first lessons in flying. The young aviator is survived by his mother, Mrs. William D. Page, and two brothers and two sisters. He was graduated from Yale in 1910.

The agency was established by Thomas Manning, an Englishman, when he came to this country in 1873. Before his death in 1902 he made a large fortune buying and selling yachts. After his death the agency was incorporated. Mrs. Annie B. Manning, the widow, became president of the company. A daughter, Mrs. Daisy Cordes, was made secretary.

SOCIETY WIFE SUES "TAMED HUSBAND"

Oil Man's Spouse Says He's
"Butterfly." He Tells How She Spends His Money.

The thoroughly subdued little man who provides his wife with a mansion and expends his income that she may live in the two rooms, at the dances and up to the state of American society women was pictured to Justice Gerard in the Supreme Court today in the person of Joseph N. Pigot, head of the oil house of Pigot, Sawyer & Co., No. 145 William street.

Pigot is being sued by his wife, Mrs. Mabel H. Pigot, for an absolute divorce, and through his counsel, T. J. Theall, opposed an application made by his wife for $2,000 a year alimony and $1,000 counsel fees.

"It's the case of the tamed little man trying to keep up with the society strides of his American wife with the luxurious ideas and inclinations of the up-to-date American society lady," exclaimed Lawyer Theall. "After he gets through paying the bills she contracts, he has about enough left to buy a few drinks and have a solitary smoke, and—well, that's what she is kicking about."

The Pigots live in Brooklyn. They have one child.

"And, Your Honor," continued the lawyer, "he pays $1,000 a year rent for a mansion in Brooklyn—one may hire a mansion in Brooklyn for that. Your Honor knows—he maintains two servants for her comfort, sends his ten-year-old son to a fashionable boarding school and expends other vast sums commensurate with the upkeep of such an elaborate household."

Attorney William R. Wilder appeared in support of the alimony motion. He declared Pigot had a large income from his oil business and that he spent his evenings and even his early mornings in the "butterfly life of the night life cafes." He told Justice Gerard that the misconduct charged by Mrs. Pigot was committed in company with a woman whose name was not known to her. He added that Pigot and this woman had recently been ejected from a well known New York hotel.

Justice Gerard reserved decision.
